REPORT OF WINDOM'S REFUNDING

A Saving of Over Five Millions Per Annum to the vernment—James Going to Florida for Ris Health—Proceedings in the Guiteau and Star Route Cases—Newsy Notes.

Washington, November 10.-Postmaster General James has made arrangements to take a pleasure trip to Florida, leaving Washington early next week, and returning in about a fortnight thereafter.

Secretary Windom's refunding operation has now been entirely completed, a few remaining suspended cases having been disposed of. The total number of bonds continued at 31/2 per cent is 579,560,050, and the total cost to the government was about $10,000, of which nearly $6,000 was for paper and printing the bonds, and for all other expenses, including the cost of making the exchanges of about 45,000,000 of bonds in London, $4,499. This makes the expense of 15; the assembly 67 democrats, 61 republicans; and "continuing" each million dollars of bonds about $17.81. Secretary Windom says that his refunding operations resulted in a much greater saving to the government than would have been effected by the refunding measures of the last congress for the following reasons: The bill passed by congress appropriated one quarter of one per cent for the expenses of refunding, which would have amounted to $1,448,900 as against less than $10,000 by his plan. As a part of the refunding measures of congress, and in order to induce the banks to accept the three per cent bonds, the bill passed the senate unanimously, repealing the tax on bank deposits, which would have reduced the annual revenues of the government $6,569,486, as shown by the receipts of have carried the legislature by 8 to 10 on joint bal-1880. The house committee of ways and lot. The senate will stand 17 democrats to 15 repubmeans of last congress, for a like reason, reported favorably on a bill repealing the tax on bank deposits, and also the two cen stamp tax on bank checks, drafts and order stamp tax on bank checks, drafts and orders amounting in the aggregate to $8,676,699. This sum added to one quarter of one per cent for the expenses of the three per cent refunding measure amounts to $10,125,595. The differences between the three and one-half and the three per cent bonds on the entire amount of bonds refunded is $2,897,800 per amount, which deducted from the total of $10,126,599 as above stated shows an advantage the government for the first year of $7,227,799 by Windom's operations over the refunding measures proposed by the over the refunding measures proposed by the last congress and as it was proposed by the house committee of ways and means to re house committee of ways and means to re duce the annual revenue derived frombanks to $8,676,699, in order to induce banks to take 3 per cent bonds. The 3½ per cent plan of Secretary Windom shows permanent advantage of $5,777,899 per annum to the government ever the measures pro-posed by the ways and means committee of the last house of representatives. Another advantage of this measure over that proposed

Judge Cox in the criminal court to-day delivered a decision quashing the information in the star route cases and discharging the defendants. The principal reason given by Judge Cox for this action is that congress in an act establishing a police court in the District of Columbia in 1870 by implication draws the line between infamous crimes and misdemeanors, any oftense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary being an infamous crime. 'After a careful review of the acts of congress bearing thereon, Judge Cox ruled that the offenses charged in the information are certainly infamous Judge Cox ruled that the offenses charged in the information are certainly infamous erimes and as such cannot be brought before the court in this manner, the proper course being by presentment or indictment by the grand jury; the defendants are therefore dis-charged.

Colonel William A. Cook, for the prosecu-tion made a statement covaluining why the

tion, made a statement explaining why the proceedings were begun by information, saying, in the excitement and delay caused by the president's assassination the grand jury had been adjourned without the knowledge of the prosecution, thereby possibly giving the defendants the benefit of statute limitations if the proceedings had been brought in the usual way. Colonel Cook afterwards assured

In the criminal court to-day Scoville stated that the warden of the prison, on his applica-tion to him yesterday, did not remember taking any letter from Guiteau directed to him (Scoville) and which he put into the hands of the district attorney. The warden declined to make an affidavit to that effect. He apologized to the court for troubling it in this mat-ter, and stated he would call it up again. Attorney Corkhill responded, denying em-phatically that he ever received from Warden Crocker, or any one else, any letter from Guiteau to Scoville. He had extended every courtesy to Scoville, realizing he was strug gling at great disadvantages, and he wondered gling at great disadvantages, and he wondered that he should make such a charge. Warden Crocker was then sworn. Corkhili asked the warden whether he ever delivered a letter to him addressed to Scoville by Guiteau. "I never did," was the reply. "Do you want to ask him any questions, Mr. Scoville?" said Judge Cox. "Xo," said Scoville. "We are not trying the Guiteau case just yet." There the matter dropped. the matter dropped.

Made So By the Forest Fires in the West. PORT HURON, Mich., November 10.—The correspondence is published here to-day between Mr. James S. McDonald, secretary of the Michigan relief committee in New York man of the Port Huron relief committee, in which the following information is elicited in reply to Mr. McDonald's inquiry: There is much sickness among the sufferers by the late fires, occasioned by defective shelter and exposure. The people are generally well supplied with farming imple-ments of immediate use, and if they could be assisted with a little ready money they could, assisted with a little ready money they could, in most cases, go to work at once. According to the revised sworn statements there will be 22,000 families in the counties of St. Clair Sanilac and Huron. Each family should have at least $100 to tide them over the winter, making a total of $220,000 required. The cash receipts of the Detroit committee, as reported to date, amount to $350,000, of which it is estimated about $135,000 represents the cash on hand. The Detroit committee are still purchasing supplies from their merchants and must have expended $200,000 for the purpose. The acts of lawlessness are for that purpose. The acts of lawlessness are increasing in the burned district and general increasing in the burned district and general demoralization is imminent. LONDON, November 10 .- Mr. Gladstone in Guildhall last night declared that his speeh uld be enforced with firmness and decision in Ireland. Its enforcement had been entrusted to those agents, who, whether constabulary or military forces, have already earned a title to the gratitude of their countrymen by the courage and exemplary patience, both of which they have performed in their difficult duties. The Times, this morning, says this emphatic statement may serve as a warning to those who, being tempted, yield even temporarily to the norent policy. We understand that the practi-cal difficulty of engaging in a conflict with the large body of Irish tenantry will be met, if the occasion arises by taking one by one the counties in which esistance to rent may be organized, and by using for the enforcement of the law, the whole power of the executive. Landlords, if assured that the government will strenuously support their legal rights, now that the last semblance of injury is removed, may be called on in certain districts to postpone their demands until the recalcitrant tenants are reduced to submission elsewhere. It is plain that this law can be effectually vindicated. Those who have time to reflect will probably profit by the exemplary punishment of their Captain Barber objected the revised statutes. Captain Barber objected on the ground that the paper was the only proper evidence in the cases of embezzlement by contractors under sections 5488 and 5494, but was not the proper evidence when the charge was actual embezzlement under the 15th article of war. ## A Little Talk from Mr. Atkinson.

Mr. Atkinson made the gin exhibitors a short talk yesterday. He said that the contest of Thursday culated to create a wrong impression. He said that it was a good thing; however, for paving the way for the final trial. It was his request that cotton of the same kind should be given to each ginner and that the cotton, afng ginned should be sent to Roston not of uniform quality rendered the trial of no value. At the same time it was useful in that it pointed out some of the snags which may now be oided at the final or real test. He suggested that the cotton for the test in December be secured from Mr. George O. Baker, of Selma, Ala., as he had a field which was understood to be of the quality de-

What the Papers say Correspondence Philadelphia Bulletin.

Correspondence Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Atlantaus are doing much to stir up the agricultural population of the state, and indeed it needs stiring. All the farmers around here buy their hay in bales. They buy also their corn and their meat. This is the practice in a country where clover grows luxuriantly, where green stuff for earlie can be cut in the field any day in the year, and where hogs and horned beasts can acquire fatness with facility. Nearly all the stock on the farms about here is poor. In a former letter have alluded to the lean pigs. "Razor backs," the Atlantaus call them. They say the farmers never enter a hog at an agricultural fair for anything but speed. They "won't have a hog that can't run away from a nigger." The pigs which I saw would give a hard ruce to a deer-hound. Some of the rich men in Atlanta of late have invested heavily in Jersey cows and bulls, and there are hopes of better things for the Georgia farm stock of the future. A few northern men have settled themselves hereabouts, and they are showing the natives how to farm for profit. Their rule is: Small farms, plenty of fertilizers and thorough cultivation. One New York man raises more cotton on a quarter section of an old plantation that was once grown on the entire place. There is no deep ploughing, not much manuring, and precious little careful, thorough cultivation. When Georgia grows all that her, soil is capable of she will be one of the richest states in the country; and meantime she possesses untold mineral wealth, which has lain for ages almost undisturbed Atlanta is soing to disturb it. Her manifest destiny is to stir Georgia from center to circumference.

Colonel Hardeman in Macon Telegraph. Colonel Hardeman in Macon Telegraph.

Is Georgia alive to the importance of the hour and the opportunity? The tide is at its flood. Shall it ebb and leave her as she was before its rising? I Macon, asa railroad, commercial and educational centre, sufficiently alive to her claims and her advantages? I fear I am compelled to give a negative, response. It is not too late to improve her opportunity, and I hope she will respond to the invitation of the business committee of the exposition, and be ably and fully represented on the 15th instant—the day especially set apart for her and Forsyth, which means Bibb and Monroe. I can assure our people, and especially our agriculturists that a visit to the exposition, that school of progressive industry, will amply repay them. Every intelligent agriculturist should, if possible, avail himself of the opportunity of seeing, at so little cost, the improved implements of husbandry and appliances for more successful agriculture collected there. It were worth a visit to Atlanta to see (if nothing else) the improved gins, with their appliances for saving and improving the cotton crop that I saw when traveling in the west in the interest of the exposition. Our people should see these improved implements and the machinery for cleaning, thrashing, hulling and the manufacture of cotton—for to see them is to utilize them, and in utilizing them we insure growth and prosperity, for it has been truly said, "the state which possesses the best skill in the use of machinery, will gain the greatest wealth, and her people will enjoy the highest welfare." Go machinery, will gain the greatest wealth, and her people will enjoy the highest welfare. "Go there and see for your selves the improvements designed for your advancement. You will be astonished at the scope of the exhibition, and will come home more than ever impressed with the magnitude and wealth of your state.

The past week was the most interesting and significant one since the exposition opened. For the first time cotton manufacturers and cotton growers consulted with each other and made unity of action henceforth possible. It is no exaggeration to say that the good results to both classes that have been made possible and are likely to follow are of more importance to both north and south than any other event since the war. Heretofore the growers of cotton have never known the northern manufacturer, nor did they ever work with the mills in view. The cotton factor has been the goobetween; and, since he has been responsible to neither class, cotton has been sold and bought at a disadvantage both to the grower and to the manufacturer. To illustrate: A farmer brought to the exposition the other day a lot of cotton in the seed which he would willingly have sold to a factor for 10½ cents a pound (lint), the market price on that day. The manufacturer examined it and gave him 16 cents a pound. In other words, the intermediate steps between planter and manufacturer cot the planter 5½ cents as pound. The greater part of this 5½ cents as pound. The greater part of this surance, storing and shipping—all these are comparatively small and will compare favorably with similar costs in handling other produce—but by the universally careless method of handling the cotton Careful picking from the field, careful ginning, secure balling so as to prevent soliing and to keep out and, and a careful assortment of the different grades saved 5½ cents a pound. It would be impossible to exaggerate the significance of this, It is a lesson that is worth millions to the southern planter.

It is not a little curious to note that a very large percentage of the more pronouncedly interested visitors are New Englanders. And it is a fact that every man of them is literally and very suspiciously bristling with figures to prove that cottou cannot be proflubly manufactured in the south. "You can grow it, but you can't weave it—and you must send it up to Connecticut and Massachusetts to be profitably utilized"—is about the average burden of the song in this particular. But I am informed by several of my practical-headed acquaintances that such assertion is not true. It has been demonstrated to the terror of yankees that cotton cloth can be produced here at least a cent per yard cheaper than in the terror of yankees that cotton cloth can be pro-fuced here at least a cent per yard cheaper than in New England. There is not only a difference be-ause of freight on the raw material, but it is ascer-ained that during the process of ginning and weav-ing the southern atmosphere has a most advan-ageous effect upon the fiber of the cotton.

No southerner could have listered to Mr. Atkinson without gaining in breadth of ideas, without more clearly estimating the value of details and the importance of apparently small things, or without having an immensely increased estimate of the natural resources and the possibilities of improvement of the section he inhabits. And there is this about the address; the more carefully it is perused the stronger impression it will make. If any may be disposed to deduct something from the growing picture recreeanted as equally attainable and desirable, there is enough of fact, of the teachings of experience, of demonstrated truth, to awaken the highest enthusiasm, and stimulate to the most carnest effort.

This exposition will accomplish a great deal. It will show to the country that there is pleuty of scope for the investment of capital; that the earth is rich in minerals, rich in ore and crude material, in which lie hidden fortunes. It will show that here there is a warm welcome for him; that peace reigns instead of bitterness and strife: that sectionalism is being rapidly oblitterated and the issues of the war forgotten. The only thing which reminds the visitor of the fact that such a strife ever existed is the signs in brokers win lows: "Confederate Bonds Wanted."

There is no reason why western goods should not find an excellent southern market. Freight rates between Chicago and Atlanta are as reasonable as between New York and Atlanta are as reasonable as between New York and Atlanta. It is believed that this trip opened the eyes of both the hosts and the guests to this fact, from which good results must surely follow. Mr. Bowen said that the members of his party were loud in their praises of the enterprise and activity of the city of Atlanta, and complimented it by calling it the "Chicago of the South."

On the whole, the condition of the colored people in Georgia is as good as could be expected. Some prejudice lingers in the minds of the last generation of planters, who were deprived of their slaves, but their prejudice will be buried with them, and they cannot live forever. The rising generation of white and black Georgians will get along together, and at no distant day Georgia will runk high as an agricultural and manufacturing state, inhabited by an industrious, intelligent and patriotic people.

AS REPORTED BY THE CONSTITU-TION'S CORRESPONDENTS.

A German Colony to Settle in Hall County-Marriage at Jonesboro-Americus Ecasts an Eighteen Pound Potato-Washington Affairs-News Clippings From the State Fress.

Washington, November 9.-Mr. W. D. Smith got one of his hands and arms badly lacerated in a gin yesterday.-Old man "hymen" is holding high carnival in this county about now. Five or six marriages followed each other in quick succession within the last fortnight, and within the next two weeks' several others will follow. Among them a prominent young lawyer of this place and one of Washington's belles. Atlanta, too.

one of Washington's belles. Atlanta, too, will in the meantime bear off one of Wilkes' fairest daughters. But these things must needs be.—Wilkes superior court is in session, Judge Alexander Erwin presiding for Judge Pottle, whose family is sick. Among the visiting lawyers are Judge Little and Seab Reese, of Sparta, W. D. Tutt, J. A. Strocker, Samuel Lumpkin and others. The case of Thomaston vs. Callaway, suit for damages, occupied the whole of yesterday and attracted considerable attention. Callaway had a steam mill located in the fork of two public roads. Thomaston's horse was frightened thereby, ran away, breaking up his buggy and injuring Thomaston personally. Thomaston sued tor $2,000 damage. The jury found a verdict for him for $15.—General Toombs gave a dining to the members of the bar yesterday.

CARTERSVILLE, November 10.-Mr. George W. Jarvis, of Canton, and Miss Fannie E. Harris, of this city, were married this morning at the residence of the bride's mother, Rev. A. J. Jarrell officiating.—Owing to the absence of many of the lawyers of this bar, absence of many of the lawyers of this bar, superior court was adjourned until next Monday, and will continue in session three weeks. There are several prisoners in jail awaiting tial. One for infanticide.—Drs. T. H. Biker and R. L. Fib performed a few days ago a very dangerous, yet successful surgical operation, in taking a very large tumor from the neck of a Mr. Baldwin, living near Bartow iron works—Mr. P. P. DuPree, of Canton works in the city to day.

JONESBORO, November 10.—Miss Lula Walker and Mr. Oscar Blalock were married last night at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. J. M. Walker, eight miles northwest of Jonesboro, Rev. T. S. L. Horwell, of Jonesboro, Riciating. A good many of the clite of the city attended the wedding, which was a magnificent affair. To-day the hospitable doors of Colonel J. L. GAINESVILLE, November 9.—The engine for the G., J. and S. railroad has arrived and is a little beauty.—Our city court is now in session. There have been six cases tried and session. There have been six cases tried and a conviction in each case. There are about sixty cases yet to be tried.—It is rumored that we are soon to have a German colony settle in our taidst. The land, 2,200 acres, I learn has been already bought.—Mrs. Roxa Blalock, of Fayetteville, is visiting relatives in our city.

Americus, November D.—The largest sweet potato ever seen in the city was on exhibition at the warehouse of Toole, McGarrah & Tondee this morning. It weighed 18 pounds, and was grown by Mr. D. H. Hooks, of this county. Messrs. T., M. & T. shipped it by express to the Atlanta exposition.

Blakely News.

We saw quite a curiosity in Blakely a few days ago—something that we had never seen before. It was a squirel as white as snow—not a colored hair upon it; and its very claws were white. It was killed in the swamp east of town by Horace Webb, colored.

Dawson Journal. We hear of several small farmers in this we hear of several sman farmers in this section who have skipped the country, leaving their creditors with the bag to hold. There are so many cases of this kind that we fear the effect will be bad on some of our farmers for another year. Where parties show a disposition to evade the payment this year we know not how they expect to obtain credit.

Colonel William M. Wadley, president of the Ocean steemship company, during his recent visit not, a, sold the steamships Gate City and City of Columbus to Messrs. F. Nickerson & Co., of the Boston and Savannah line, and and City of Columbus to Messrs. F. Nickerson & Co., of the Boston and Savannah line, and the directors of the company, at their meeting yesterday morning, confirmed his action. These vessels will take their places on their new route as soon as they can be spared from the present line between New York and this city. They will be replaced on this line by three new iron steamships of 6,000 bales capacity, somewhat of the build of the "City of Augusta," but with improvements in their construction and machinery which have suggested themselves since that fine vessel was built. The contract for the new steamers has been awarded and for the new steamers has been awarded and work will be commenced on them at once. This purchase by the Boston line will give Savannah first-class vessels running to all the principal northern cities, and make our mer-thant marine, even more than at present, the superior to and the best equipped of that of any other on the South Atlantic coast.

Columbus Times.

Yesterday some excitement was created in business circles by the announcement that Mr. M. C. Gordon, proprietor of the New York store, had failed. From what we could gather, it seems that Mr. Gordon, recognizing the condition of his business, notified E. S. Jaffrey & Co., of New York, the largest creditors, that he could not meet his obligations, and requested them to foreclose their mortgage. Yesterday evening the sheriff closed the store and the stock is now in his hands until a receiver is appointed, which will be done in a few days. In the meantine the store will remain closed and an inventory of the stock will be taken, after which the doors will be opened and the goods put upon the market for sale. We understand that the liabilities amount to about $75,000, while the assets are estimated at about one-half that amount. We understand that mortgages are held against the stock to the amount of $25,held against the stock to the amount of $25, 000, which, of course, will first be satisfied. We regret very much the failure of Mr. Gor don, as he was one of our livest and most liberal-minded business men. We trust that he will be able to so arrange matters as to re-sume business in a short while.

Mr. Martin A. Cennolly, a merchant in Oil City, Pa., writes: "I inherited ill health from my parents, who were both short-lived. My wife is a sickly little woman, and has suffered considerably. We have had five children, three of whom died in infancy; the other two a boy four years of age and a girl of seven years. have always been onlie puny, weak, and a boy four years of age and a girl of seven years. have always, been quite puny, weak, and sickly. Sometime ago I read a medical work that spoke of iron as being essential to life, that a want of iron in the blood was the principal cause of ill health. Shortly afterward I saw an advertisement of Brown's Iron Bitters. I determined to try it for myself-and family. The result has far exceeded my greatest anticipation. Myself, wife and children, have all grown healthy and strong. Sores, aches and pains, headaches, indigestion and sleeplessness, formerly so common in my family, rouble us no more. Every bottle is worth its weight in gold." WARNER'S SAFE CURE

SOUND INVESTMENT. PHILADELPHIA AND READING RAILROAD.—
It is a strange comment upon the action of that small section of the shareholders who have taken up the position of the hostility to Mr. Gowen, the late president, that when their plaus have at any time appeared to triumph, the shares have fallen in value, while the smallest indication of success attending Mr. Gowen's proposals has at once been the signal for a considerable advance. This has again been the case last month, when the shares have risen from 31 to 37, and the Deferred Income bonds from 1-2 discount to 1 premium. The mere fact of the latter stock advancing is interpreted as fore-shadowing the probable success of Mr. Gowen at the next election. The earnings to the end of August show an extraordinary improvement as compared with last year, the net increase being $1,374,308, or £274,861.

CONFEDERATE COTTON LOANS—The advertisement which has lately appeared inviting holders of these Bonds to deposit the same with the influential Committee which was formed some months since, should, I think, be cordially responded to. The position of the unfortunate subscribers to these loans has remained in the most unisatisfactory state for many years, and an almost universal belief has prevailed that it would be quite useless to attempt any agitation for a reconsideration of their fights. An impression, however, has always existed among a certain section, that as time wore on the apparently arbitrary conduct of the United States legislature in compelling the southern states to repudiate their habilities would provesus expetible of some modification or amendment; hence the existence of the committee. It is understood that, under their auspices important negotiations have already been commenced, and that although the progress thus far has necessarily been but slow, still there are sufficient grounds for taking so hopeful a view of the future as to justify an invitation to all who are interested to co-operate in further proceedings. At the outset, it is urged as the strongest plea on the part of the holders that they seek not to enforce their claims upon the United States, but to request legislative sanction to the annulment of that decree which practically prevented the southern states, who incurred the debts, from recognizing their obligations, even if they wished to do so. It is argued that the United States can afford to lake a generous view of the position, their prosperity having exceeded the most sanguine estimates which could possibly have been formed, and having now at tained to such a high position among the nations, the opportunity occurs to remove forever the only one blenish attaching to American state securities—viz: the rependation of th

A WORD TO PARENTS.

To-morrow is children's day at the exposition grounds.

The executive committee, with a proper appreciation of the situation, has reduced the entrance fee for children to half price for that day. The people of Atlanta have not, up to this time, given the exposition, the support which it should A gentleman who has been living in the city for several years watched a crowd of more than a thousand come out of the gates on yesterday and saw only five faces that he recognized. The attendance is made up almost entirely of strangers, most of who have come from other states than Georgia.

Children's day furnishes not only an ex cuse but a reason for every parent to make a visit to the grounds. There are thousands of curious and interesting sights that would make the little ones happy and that their hearts yearn to see. A day spent by them amid the wonderful machinery, the beautiful sights and the queer show would be indeed a red letter day, long to be remembered. It would fill a large part of their young lives and make them happy for weeks to come. There are few fathers in the city who cannot afford to give one day to their children and the small amount of money that is required for their admis sion. The same money could not be spent in any other way so as to give them a tithe of the enjoyment or enlightenment that would come from a day at Oglethorpe Park. If the fathers are business men, and cannot they should arrange for the to take the little folks out. The grounds are thoroughly policed, everything is kept in the best order, the ma chinery is all guarded, so that accidents are impossible, and there is not the slightest im propriety in a lady going out with no escort save a troop of happy children. There ought to be five thousand little ones admitted to the grounds to-morrow; if the hearts of the people are where they ought to be this figure will be surpassed. Let every parent see to it that his children are not kept are out at the exposition seeing the sights that well as a vast wealth of cattle-raising, which will make the staple of their prattle for the next month to come. Let all the children go.

A REMARKABLE EXHIBIT.

Every display at the exposition is worthy of study, but the exhibit made by the Rich mond and Danville railroad and its combina tions is of unusual significance, and demands special attention. The collection of woods and minerals in this exhibit is without doubt the finest and the most suggestive ever made in the world. It shows almost at a glance the immense material resources of the south, and, studied in connection with the other southern exhibits, demonstrates beyond all questio that the field of profitable investment in this section is practically boundless. In the display made by the Richmond and Danville combination there are, from North Carolina alone, copper ores, masses of great size and richness: refined copper, in ingots and plates lead and silver ores; iron ores from many mines; corundum, marbles, soapstones, mica in clear sheets a foot square; sandstones, flex ible and other; chrome iron; kaolin; jewels, amethyst, c. rringom, green and rose, berlys true sapphires, zircans, etc., including fine specimens of the newly-found gem. Hiddendite, which rivals the diamond. Those enum erated are all from North Carolins, and con tained in the exhibit of the Richmond and Danville railroad company, which, besides samples of the wealth of that state, embraces products, too many to enumerate of other states traversed by its system of railways. In that company's exhibit may be seen some $7,000 worth of gold nuggets, besides bars of retorted gold of weights from 38 to 58 ounces, and a single mass of gold of the value o $3,300 in the quartz that forms its matrix. The display of woods in the rough and worked, in the same exhibit, is very large and fine. In this exhibit there are also rare and desirable qualities of iron.

It is also demonstrated that in the region covered by the Richmond and Danville and its connections that the crops produced in one year by some of the land will sell for more the land itself will bring. The exhibit is also remarkable for the display of "bright" tobaccos for from North Carolina, from which the Durham brands are manufactured. The value of this tobacco is more than $1,000 a ton. A New York industrial weekly, whose editor has been dazzled by the possibilities which the exposition makes manifest, writes thus of the resources of the south: It has always been seen that the south, making its cotton crop net-that is to say, growing its own food a typical slack-wad. There are several things in and manufacturing fabrics equal in value to the lothing of its population-would thus demonstrate tself to be the richest country in the world. It is lagued that it has already reached that result ith, moreover, its yield of cereals and meats and its manufacture of fabrics increasing yearly. Grow g its own food, its outlay for clothing fabrics met the returns from its own manufacture of textiles it has, in round numbers, $300,000,000 net, $40 per ead of population, $200 per family, from cotton alone. To this add the product of 330 million pounds of tobacco raised in six states, 200 million ishels of rice raised in as many states, together ith the revenue from naval stores, timber, ruits and vegetables, and other products of varied dustry in the renovated south

Since 1870 the capacity of southern mills has increased from eleven thousand to more than fifteen thousand looms, and from four thousand to seven nundred thousand spindles. Within the same pe riod the consumption of cotton has more than ubled. It was forty-five million pounds in 1870 and in 1880 it had increased to more than one hun ired million. The census returns show the past lecade the south has made more rapid strides in atton manufactures than either the country at arge or New England, the great center of industry

n America. Magnificent water-power for spinning and other irposes is supplied by the streams which flow rom the east and west slopes of the Alrange to the Atlantic eghany dississippi, and from the southern stope to the Gulf North Carolina is estimated to have more than three million horse power in her streams from the table lands to the sea. This exceeds that of all the team engines in the United States or Great Britain ombined. South Carolina has not far from the me amount of water power, from streams flowing o the Atlantic ocean, and Georgia, from water flow ng to that ocean and to the gulf, probably an ever greater amount, inasmuch as the difference of ele ation between the sources among the mountain and the mouths of the rivers in that state emptying nto the ocean or gulf, (the Chattahoochee, Etowah avannah, Broad, Ocmulgee, Flint, Ogeechee, At maha, etc.,) ranges from one thousand to three ousand feet, and the rivers fow in the aggregate ousands of miles in that state.

The splendid lift of the continent, which fur ishes this vast reservoir of power has its crests the highest in North Carolina, reaching near,7,00 eet), in an even chain, 250 to 280 miles from the caboard. Its significance and value to the region s far beyond the water-power which it supplies mportant as that is. It insures a mild, equable cli ate, in a wide extent of country, commencing as on as a narrow strip of alluvial plain along the shore is passed, and stretching up the gradual scent to the hillsides, among fertile valleys and rich forests, till the summit is reached and turned with like fertility and wealth of natural product of the western slope. This climate is probably une

A large part of the region referred to in the oregoing is traversed by the the Richmond and Danville road and its southern branches. This combination embraces 2,000 miles in its system, has only eight millions of capital, tock and bonds, on the 200 miles in its origi nal ownership, and that is to say $40,006 pe mile, against $100,000 per mile of stock and bonds on the railways of the middle states, $86,000 per mile on the Pacific railways and those of the Pacific states, and $50,000 per mile on those of the New England states With the western states no fair comparison is open, inasmuch as the facility for easy construction of railways in that region (so many lines being unfinished, with, construction ac-counts still open), precludes ready adjustment of mileage to capital at any given pe-

In addition to these 2,006 miles, the Rich mond and Danville system covers lines in process of construction in western North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Texas. This system starts in one direction from Alexandria, Va., opposite Washingson city, and in another from Baltimore—utilizing a steamboat service which it controls-to West Point, Va. and enjoying perfect advantages at both points of complete railway connections and permanently deep water It traverses eight of the most populous and pros perous southern states; includes among it stations the capital cities of four thereof; passes along or contiguous to the eastern lopes of the mountain ranges in the interior. and shares largely in the passenger traffic which comes of grain and tobacco, cotton, nome to-morrow while all their little friends fruit and vegetable-growing industries, as has made famous the slope of the Appalachian chain in that part.

Our people have never fully realized the mportance of this great system of roads or the work it has been doing in Georgia and in the south. The credit for the present perfection of the system is due in a great neasure to Colonel G. J. Foreacre. When he vas first placed in control of, the Atlanta and Charlotte Air-Line, he saw the necessity as well as the immense value of this combinaion. He was persistent and energetic, and ne succeeded not only in perfecting the road he controlled but in putting the facts about the country and the advantages of the present system in such strong light that capitalists ave been eager to invest in the securities of VOLUMES XXI. and XXII. of Scribner's Magazine nelude the monthly issues of that admirable periodical from November, 1880, to October, 1881. In these two handsome volumes may be said to be comprehended an epitome of the best thought of the time. They are a little library within themselves. Some of the best serial novels, the best short stories and sketches, and the most delightful bits of verse that have appeared in this country during the year, are in these attractive covers. A list of con-tributors would simply be a list of the best names familiar to students of the literature of the day.

Indeed, it is one of the proudest boasts of Scrib ner's that its catholicity of judgment and taste ha opened its pages to many classes of topics which, before its advent, were not considered suitable fo current discussion in a literary magazine. The wonenal in moderd times-has amply justified whatever may have seemed like a new departure in th

The conductors of the magazine may justly claim that they are, in some sense, discoverers as well as inventors. How great a service to the caus of American development in art and literature, a wise and patient fostering of hidden and unknown power, has been rendered by the editorial control of this magazine, it is impossible to estimate: but it is a very great service. Looking through the two volumes that are now given to the public in substantial form, one sees the names of artists and authors who have first reached the world of readers through the pages of Scribner's.

In art, especially, the conductors of the magazine have created a complete revolution Much has been written, and much more might fairly be said about the change and the improvement wrought in American art, as illus trated in wood engraving and painting, since the stablishment of Scribner's Magazine. Whatever may be said to the credit of American magazin and illustrated newspapers-and we are rightfully proud of these-it should never be forgotton that the fresh impetus given to this department of art is wholly due to the labors of the conductors of Scrib ner. What magazine in the world, before Scribner's appeared, would have thought it worth while to ublish sets of its best engravings, in separate sheets, as works of art, to be enshrined in portfolios and studied as masterpieces? That there has a popular demand for these ns, and that their beauty and excellence have amply justified their publication, is gratifying testimony to the worth of the pictures in the volumes for the year last past are vorthy of high praise. The full-page portraits of adstone, Beaconsfield, Dr. Dollinger, Father Hya einthe, and the frontispieces, are really triumphs of art, of which those who have furnished them to the world of readers may well be proud. In the volumes before us, Eugene Schuy-ler's history of "Peter the Great," George W. Cable's "Madame Delphine," Mrs. Francis Hodg son Burnett's "A Fair Barbarian," W. D. How ell's 'A Fearful Responsibility," and other equally important works, destined to take their place in manent literature, have just appeared These will be classics. But of the papers which are of immediate and contemporaneous interest, space will not allow us to speak. These, like the delightful things that are found in the editorial departments of the magazine, are known of all men, at least of all men and women who read. The freshness of the monthly pages of Scribner's has been a subject for the admiration and pleasure of its readers; and now that we have those pages in enduring form, it is a satisfaction to find that they have not become stale by the passage of the months.

When the "Indian Prince" receives the saddlery which has just been made for him by a provincial firm here he will certainly be able to convince all rivuls. Seven seddles in all have been made, and each is of a different color to the others. The "prince" himself—we trust he is not a Mahometan—is to ride on pink hog-skin, embroidered in blue silk and with a gold border. This will have a very pretty effect, but the saddles of the prime minister and chancellor of the exchequer are scarcely less attractive, the one being white and the other buff. The remaining quartette are quite as striking in brilliance of hue, and the august Indian will therefore present a most rainbow-like Jappearance when, accompanied by his suite, he goes out for an amble, more especially as most of them will be stree to bestride white horses with pink noses and flowing tails dyed red halfway up. #### A TOMBOY

She comes! she comes! with song and glee She leads her train o'er lawn and lea! And fair and free her wind blown tress, High o'er those booming sounds All hail! wild queen of madeap

No daisy chain will this gay girl so anny chain will this say girl Fre weave to deek her daneing curl; No wreath entwine of bud or bell. Though both, she wots, become her we Not hers to guess of joy or grief By conning of a holly leaf; She tents not fortune's smile or frown By puffs of dandelion down; No necklace frames of rowan gome. No necklace frames of rowan gems, Nor fragrant, flower-wrought diadems

No poet she to doze and dream
Long, lazy hours by haunted stream!
If small the brook, she il head her train
And leap it o er and back again;
Or if her boys will but away
She'll wade it, maybe—I can't say,
Her boys—all boys—around her press
For love of her sweet winsomeness,
And dogs that bark for very glee—
A harun-searum company!

She's o'er the lea, she's won the wood, This dainty bud of maidenhood! These joyous peals, I trow, bespeak The gay, glad mirth of hide and seek, As hazel dell and brackened glade Her graceless hand in turns invade; Little she recks rents or shreds, But boldly breasts the bramble beds! Tis she has bade them rig the swing,

And wood for fires unhallowed bring;
'Tis she the torch illicit waves,
And leads her troops through mirky caves;
'Tis she hath crossed the pine trunk thin,
That, rocking, bridges you dark linn—with joyous eneer and wild halloo Hounds on her host to derring-do! Tis she has brught those nimble feet To scatter wide the windrows sweet; On fragrant hay-ricks led the foe, And bong hours' work at once had low; Yet Farmer swan, who from the stile Had watched it all, n'er ceused to smile-"God bless her purty face! She be A regular Tomboy, sartinlee!"

GENERAL GORDON'S TALK ABOUT THE GEORGIA PACIFIC

tistical and Economic Review of its Territory and Prospects—Pacts About the Carolina Cen-tral—Absurd Reports About the Rich-mond and Danville Stock:

THE GEORGIA PACIFIC: New York Times, November 9. The Hon, A. H. Colquitt, governor of Georgia, and ral John B. Gordon are at the St. James hotel, In this city, and are here on business connected with a new line of railroad through the south to be known as the Georgia Pacific railway company. For a long time the project of a railroad across the south ern portion of this continent, intersecting the south ern tier of states, and establishing through trans portation from the Pacific coast to the southern Atantic scaboard, has been talked of, and at last has been put into operation by the letting out of contracts for the first 500 miles of the route. The road -the Georgia Pacific railway-is virtually an extension of the well known and Danville road, and, projected, its tracks will run through an immensely rich tract of territory. Among the richest of the exhibits shown this year at the Atlanta cotton exhibition were specimens of coal and iron, cotton, and woods taken from the territory adjacent to the projected line of the new Ge Pacific railway company, an enterprise which i nemes as regards the developing of valuable territory since the laying of the tracks of the Unic Pacific road across the continent. The Georgia Pacific, it is confidently asserted by its projectors ed to be the great route for the transportation of southern products and for passenger, traffic between the southern-eastern states and the great west, besides being a most important agent in the veloping of the mineral wealth of Alabama, to which the attention of capitalists has been of lat so imperatively called. The road will form the western connection of the line known as the Richmond and Danville road and connections, which extend through 2,000 miles of territory from Washington, in the District of Columbia, to Atlanta, Ga., with various branches in the Carolinas. Five hundred miles of this new connection—the Georgia Pacific railway—have been already contracted for and are now in process of—construction, extending from Atlanta west to Birmingham, Ala., through what has been pronounced by competent authority to be a coal and iron region not surpassed by any in the United States. Birmingham will be a junction for connecting roads south and north; from this point the Georgia Pacific, as projected and surveyed, will traverse the state of Alabama in a westerly direction, passing through Columbus or Aberdeen, in Mississippi, near the line dividing the states of Alabama and Mississippi, and thence through Greenville or Arkansas City, where the Mississippi river will be crossed to Texarkana, its terminus, and there connection will be made with the Texas Pacific road direct to El Paso and thence by the C. P. Huntington, southern Pacific route to San Francisco and cities along the western slope. The connection for the Pacific coast by the new ronte at Birmingham is midway between Nashville, Tenn., and Vicksburg. Miss. It has not yet been decisively determined whether the road will pass through Greenville and Columbus, Miss., or turning north, benefit Aberdeen and Arkansas City, in the same state. For 100 miles of the route of this Georgia Pacific road through Georgia, the capital city of which is becoming so great a factor in the forwarding of southern interests, the surrounding country is rich in coal and iron which has bitherto found its only markets in the southern tier of cities—Mobile, Ala, Montgomery, in the same state, and other towns, owing to the lack of transportation facilities, except north and south, which have been the favorite directions chosen by the former projectors of railroads in the south, which is pecuning so great a factor in western connection of the line known as the Rich mond and Danville road and connections, which the new road, running due west, is calculated to supply. The projected road will pass through the heart of the Black Warrior and Little Warrior coal-fields, and the Coosa river coal territory. That a monopoly of the coaltransporting interests promises seems evidenced by the nearness of communication which will be established to the chief cities of Georgia and the two Carolinas, and by the route projected which makes possible air line traffic through the south from the Pacific coast to the south Atlantic ports:

It is expected that the carrying capacities of the Georgia Pacific road, as soon as operated, will be faxed to their utmost, as it is asserted cities along its route will be supplied with fuel at as much as a one-half decrease of the present states. Atlanta will be supplied with coal and iron, it is asserted, at one-half what is being paid to-day, thus directly encouraging manufacture by steam. To New Orleans the route, by rail and river, will be reduced to 600 to 700 miles, as against that traversed by the present supplies from Fittsburg, 2,000 miles distant. The coal in the belts mentioned is bituminous and of the same nature as the Pittsburg product. The work on the line which is now being performed is under contract to the Richmond and Danville construction company, a corporation chartered by the emanagers of the new road, will find their supstruction company, a corporation chartered by the state of New & Irev, and mainly impelled by northern capital. Memphis and Vicksburg, it is said by the managers of the new road, will find their supplies materially cheapened by their transportation by this route. Manufacturing interests in the adjacent states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, and Arkansas, as well as Georgia, will, it is claimed, receive a fresh impetus through the promised development of new and cheaper facilities for fuel. Apart from the predictions of other experts who have gone over the regions pierced by the new line, Dr. Little, state geologist of Georgia, gives his support to the statement that here has been surprised a territory richer in coal than any other within his knowledge in the United States.

General Gordon is the president of the new road. A number of prominent business men of this city are directors, stockholders, or otherwise interested in the enterprise, among whom are Mr. George W. Perkins, president of the Mercantile national bank; Mr. W. P. Clyde and Mr. E. H. Perkins, of the Importers and Traders' bank. General T. M. Logan is the president of the Danville and Richmond construction company, which is building the road in question, and Mr. George W. Perkins is the treasurer of the same company. General Gordon said last evening to a Times reporter: "We believe that there is a great south as well as a great west, and we propose to develop it. The resources of the country are inexhaustible on the line of our road."

THE COLE SYSTEM.

A representative of this paper interviewed General Thomas, vice president of the Cole syndicate "General Thomas, will you tell me what is the object of your visit to the crescent city at the present time."

"Well, sir, the people of the north have been told that New Orleans was dead, and the people were deserting it; that there was no business worth building a railread to secure, and so we thought we would come down and see whether you were painting your houses, fixing up your yards, repairing your woodsheds and making an effort to build up your yards, or pairing your woodsheds and making an effort to build up your woodsheds and making an entort to build up your city, or not."

"And what have you found?"

"We have found a splendid city, sir, and one that from all indications is now on the high road to prosperity. We visited Memphis with a view of seeing what share of the western business we could obtain by securing a road to that city, but we have made up our minds to-day that New Orleans is the point. Why, sir, we can see no reason why this city should not, with its grand waterway, become the great exchange between the east and west, and I am of the firm opinion that it will before many years"

"Is it true, general, that you have leased the line of the Louisville and Nashville milroad from Calera or Birningham to this city?"

of the Louisville and Nashville railroad from Calera or Birningham to this city?"

"Not exactly, but we have leased its privileges and shall run our own rolling stock over its track directly into this city, and if possible make arrangements to do our own business here in the shape of bills of lading, shipping receipts and contracts incependent of other lines."

"Then you will not extend your line from Meridian to this point, as our people were in hopes you would do?"

would do?"
"We can tell better about this later, as our arrangements with the Louisville and Nashville folks is only ments with the Louisvine and Masnyllie loiks isonly temporary, and was acquiesced in by them to pre vent our so doing, as they did not want us to build and knew that we must get into New Orleans, and had the money to do it. It is possible that we shall extend our road, however, into this city by-and-by.

THE CAROLINA CENTRAL. Charlotte Observer.

who learned of the transfer yesterday express much satisfaction with it, as it insures a competing line to the seaboard, operated by a very wealthy and powerful milroad combination. An officer of the Carolina Central in this city yesterday, expressed the conviction that the new management would not continue to pool freights with the Richmhul and Danville company, and if his opinion is confirmed will result in very great advantage to Charlotte. It was stated that the Richmond and Danville company, it will be remembered, were negotiating for this road a few days ago, and it seems that Robinson was bidding for it at the same time. The terms of the sale could not be learned from any railroad authority in the city.

RICHMOND AND DANVILLE.

New York Banker and Broker, November 7.

We can definitely deny that there is any truth whatever in the rumor that Messrs. Clyde and Perkins are buying the Richmond and Danville stock to get control away from the p esent management. The rapid advance in this stock and the large sales have been wholly due to the discovery by the public that the Richmond and Danville, with but $4,000,000 of stock, owns and controls over 2,000 miles or milroad that monopolize the business of the Piedmont country, one of the richest sections of the union. That the stock is now a certain eight per cent stock with the early prospect of a stock dividend of 100 per cent. Since we gave the facts in detail concerning this newly listed stock, many of our readers have advised us of large purchases that have already yielded handsome profits, and yet, as compared with prices of older securities, the present price is very low. It is only another illustration in favor of our strong stand for the Southeastern railroad stocks as the most promising of our railway securities on the ground of actual merit.

Mayor DeWolfe, who returned from Tennessee via Paint Rock reports much work to be done yet before the Western North Carolina road is complete to Paint Rock. It will, he thinks, take several months. At one place, he reports, above Warm Springs, there is a distance of two miles upon the river bank, along a great part of which the space for the track will have to be blasted from the solid rock cliff, upon which nothing has as yet been done. The bridge two miles above Warm Springs has not ret been built, the hands being now engaged upon the abutments. A CONDUCTOR INJURED.

Robert Bardee, of the Western and Atlantie Railroad, a: the Point of Death.

Robert Hardee, a freight conductor on the Western and Atlantic railroad, was badly, probably fatally, njured yesterday near Rodgers, a station six mile from Cartersville.

Mr. Hardee was running freight train No. 16, and was coming south. At Rodgers he took a side track in order to allow the passenger train, due here at 8:20 o'clock p. m., to pass him. When his train ran on the side track the passenger train was not yet at Rodgers's, and Mr. Hardee sat down on the end of a cross-tie to await its coming. While sitting there, he, it is supposed, went to sleep and did not awaken when the passenger train came. The engineer thought there was enough room to pass without any accident and made no effort to arouse him. The engine passed Mr. Hardie's all right, but the step to the tender struck him about the shoulder, knocking him quite a distance and infleting injuries which will, in all probability, result in death. Mr. Hardee was a gentleman of fine attainments, and has been in the employment of the Western and Atlantic road for years. He has a wife and children residing in Atlanta, and this accident has cast a gloom over a household that hitherto has known only happiness.

The latest advices from Cartersville, where the injured man now is, are unfavorable to Mr. Hardee's recovery. rom Cartersville.

Returning to the town he swore out a warrant against Gann charging him with assault and battery, and this warrant Constable Fincher and Deputy Sheriff Kilgore attempted to execute, but again Gann showed fight and declined to submit and when the officers attempted to enforce their demand a row ensued. During the difficulty Gann struck Kilgore twice with a spade, knocking him down each time. As Kilgore arose the last time he drew his revolver and fired at Gann with a deadly effect. The ball entered the abdomen and death instantly ensued. All the parties to the afray have been looked upon as good quiet citizens.

Mr. Herne and Miss Cochrane gave a forcible portrayal of their respective characters, and established a reputation for excellence. Indeed, there was not an indifferent performer in the entire cast. . KILLED WITH AN AX.

A Terrible Crime Committed in Oglethorpe Elberton New South

In that portion of Goosepond district, Ugle thorpe county, lying near Broad river, on Monday night of last week, there was a scene of horror too horrible to depict, and certainly fearful enough to freeze the blood of the be-holder. There and then a bloody deed was done, a soul sent unbidden before its maker, Charlotte Observer.

Last Thursday the Carolina Central changed hands in New York, Mr. John M. Robinson, president of the Bay line of steamers, the Seaboard and Roanoke, the Raleigh and Gaston and the Raleigh and Augusta Air-Line railways purchasing from Mr. Murchison, a countrolling interest in the road. It was stated yesterday on reliable authority that the wife of Mr. Edward Matthews, of New York, who holds a large amount of stock in the road, had served out an injunction against the transfer, but it is not believed that this will do more than delay the change in the management for a short while. Those of our citizens and when the Kidd family moved in she left and, it is supposed, went back to Jackson county. After staying around here some time Dunson went off—to Macon it is said—and had been in the neighborhood but a short time when this unfortunate affair oca short time when this unfortunate affair oc-curred. It is reported he had been on a sprce and had not sobered off when, on Monday evening he called at Kidd's. One account is that Dunson met Mrs. Kidd in her garden and tild her he wanted her to sell out and go to Macon, and that she would not consent; that she went into the house and he followed her. Kidd being present and there he conther, Kidd being present, and there he continued to abuse her, and finally struck her, and, striking at her a second time, hit the child which she had taken; she then left the house to go to her father-in-law's house, about a mile distant. Another account gives no quarrel between Dunson and Mrs. Kidd, and that Kidd told his wife to go to his father's. If quarrel there was, however, and blows given, Kidd heard the one and saw the other without resenting either. Both accounts agree that when Mrs Kidd was about 200 yards from the house sh turned and saw Kidd and Dunson quietly sitting down and facing each other, and that was the last look she was ever to take of Dunson. Between 9 and 10 o'clock at night a fire appeared in the direction of the house occupied by Kidd, and Jaque Eberhart was the first to reach the place and find the house nearly consumed, and could see the head of a man protruding from what appeared to be burning bedding. And this was the condi-tion of affairs until the next day when the heat had so far died out as to permit an inves-tigation. This investigation developed a hu-man body, lying under bedding which had burnt to a crisp, the mass of half-burnt bedburnt to a crisp, the mass of half-burnt bed-ding protecting the breast from being de-stroyed by the consuming element, but the legs, arms and head, being exposed to the flames, were almost burnt to asl amination developed the fact that the man had been killed. The lick of an axe was discovered on the left side of the head, just above the eye, and another blow with the blade of the axe, the point falling just above the root of the teeth of the upper law in front, several teeth being cut out (found on the ground by the skull), and cutting off a portion of the lower jaw. Lying on the body was discovlower jaw. Lying on the body was discovered $1:65 in specie, knife and memorandum ook, the contents of the latter revealing the fact that this was all there was of the human body of poor Dunson. The coroner's jury ren-dered a verdict that deceased came to his death dered a verdict that deceased came to his death by violence at the hands of Wesley Kidd. Some difficulty was had in securing interment for the remains, but a gentleman finally vol-unteered to perform the act, and a hole was dug, the body rolled up in a bed quilt and tossed in the hole, and thus the rites of Chris-tian burial were given! It was thought a little singular that, although all the people in the neighborhood turned out to the fire, not a member of the elder Kidd's family put in an appearance, although they put in an appearance, although they lived as near as most of those who were there. Wesley Kidd was not at the scene of the burning, and had disappeared from the neighborhood. On Friday last he put in an ap-pearance, however, and admits that he killed Dunson, and gives his version of the affair. He reiterates the account given of the scene between Dunson and his wife; that he abused her because she would not consent to go to Macon; that he struck her; that he (Kidd) did not resent Dunson's conduct because he was afraid of him. He then states that after Mrs. Kidd left the house Dunson followed her awhile and then commenced raving about the room; then began to throw the bedclothing in the fire; that he then told Dunson he must behave himself or leave the house; that Dunson made an impertment reply, where Dunson made an impertinent reply, whereupon he seized an axe and hit him on the head with it. The first blow was followed quickly by a second. The blows of the axe had knocked the man under the bed, but he saw that he had killed him, and became so frightened he did not know what to do, so he ran away. He was now ready to give himself up. Suppose the fire was the result of the burning bedquilts, which was partly thrown in the fire by Dunson, some of the ends or corners reaching out to the floor. How craven the man who permits another to insult and abuse his wife permits another to insult and abuse his wife and strike her and her babe, without resent-ment, and is then roused to nurderous indignation at the burning of a bed-quilt!

NORTHERN COMMENT

ON THE SOUTHERN PEOPLE AND AGRICULTURE.

What Commissioner Loring Saw On His Trip to the sition—Atlanta's Thrift—The Desolation Southern Villages and the Un-changing Ideas of the People.

Washington Post Interview. Dr. George B. Loring, commissioner of agriculture, returned last evening from his trip to Atlanta, where he went to attend the In ternational cotton exposition, and was found quietly seated in his home office by a reporter for the Post.

Doctor, how did you enjoy your southern trip, and what did you accomplish?" was the introductory interrogatory. Well, sir, I left here one week ago Monday and went direct to Atlanta. I had called a convention of representative delegates of the various agricultural sections in the cotton growing states to discuss cotton cultivation. I called it there as a part of the cluster that is to meet here in January to discuss agricultural educagrain growing, horticultural and animal industries. The deleexposition, agreed with me. I delivered an address on Wednesday morning last and had states. I pointed out the vast amount of money expended in cereals 282 000 000 bushels fail to inure to the benefit of the state. money expended in cereals, 282,000,000 bushels having been purchased by the south last year, and that they could grow a large proportion of it if they properly developed their agriculturbillities and of the people of the south. The belief existed, however, and the legislature of the state and of the people of the south. it if they properly developed their agricultural interests. I showed that what they consumed could be raised at home, and cited various authorities, among them those of Henry W. Grady, publisher of The Atlanta Constitution. It was as good an industrial exposition as I ever saw. The exhibits of the manufactures of the north were very interesting. The exhibition of the mineral and agricultural resources of the country lying along the lines of the southern railroads was as instructive as I have ever seen. I called together the agents of the railways who had charge of the exhibits, and asked that the whole display be lodged in the agricultural department at Washington, as an illustration of the natural resources of the several sections. I was warmly seconded by Senator Brown, and he agreed to transfer the exhibition of hisown road to the department, free of charge so far as his road was concerned, and the matter will be considered by the other roads. It was thought that the exhibition would be placed here permanently, so that members of congress and others way study and know the regular rows of mean, and squalid hovels, half-denuded of the people of the south. The belief existed, however, and the legislature of Georgia succeeded in doing some real damage to an enterprise that is calculated to do the south more real good than almost anything else that has been instituted. The exhibition of cotton growing and of cereal crops on the ground was very fine. There was a valuable exhibition of cattle, largely Jerseys, of a remarkable quantity, a first rate display of short horns and some good Durhams. Altogether the exposition in all its branches and general management was admirably arranged and systematically conducted. The people of Atlanta were very attentive and much in earnest. They manifested a great spirit of enterprise. The city was very attractive to myself and those with me. We were treated with great hospitality. I shall make another visit there on the 6th of December, as I was urged to by the officials who will be there when the national cotton growers' association meets."

Among those with Dr. Loring on his trip were Senators Hampton, Morgan and Slater, all of whom agreed it was a creditable and useful exhibition. The commissioner's address was replete with statistics embodying nothing of a political character, and was received with great favor.

New Haven Palladium Correspondence New Haven Palladium Correspondence.

Since our return many inquiries have been made as to Atlanta's great undertaking, and in reply it can truly be said that as an exhibit of American progress and American industry and American skill in the arts of manufacture it is fully up and in some respects exceeds the centennial exhibition at Philadelphia five years ago. I would advise any one who thinks of making a southern trip to go while this exposition is in progress; he will come away realizing more of the immense resources of our country, and feel well paid resources of our country, and feel well paid for the expense of time and money.

'Attanta itself is a series of substantial busi-ness blocks built mostly of iron and brick and ness blocks built mostly of iron and brick and located around a railroad depot, and a bewildering array of tracks which run through the heart of the city. In close proximity to the depot is the state capitol, the new and elegant post-office and the great Kimball house and other large hotels. There are several jobbing houses here that are doing over a million of business a year, and a cotton mill is booming day and night with 300 looms and 10,000 spindles. The situation of Atlanta is not a natural site for a successful commercial city; it has no very favorable advantages of its own, its coal has to be drawn two hundred miles, its coal has to be drawn two hundred miles the coar has to be drawn two induced miles, and the only river near the city is the Chat-tahoochee, and that is small and not naviga-tile. Even the soil about the city is inferior, and cotton alone can be raised successfully and yet Atlanta to-day is the center of a population of near 50,000 people and represents the best distributed industries of the south; it represents the new age that is dawning for the whole south, and by its wonderful growth shows itself to be moved by that innovating commercial spirit and enterprise which in times past founded empires, and in later days established the great marts of the world. Atlanta suffered more by the war than any city north or south but the war than any city north or south, but the ashes sown by Sherman contained a social seed that burst forth into another city more beautiful than the one destroyed by the flames of war; they received into their midst flames of war; they received into their midst valuable accessions from the east and from the west, but the great majority of the men who are making Atlanta famous for its business energy and push are natives of the soil of Georgio. The climate of this part of the state is said to be delightful. The city is about 1,100 feet above the sea, and the long summers here have the invigorating trade winds and their cool and restful nights. Not far to the north and the northeast are the beautiful Kennesaw or Chattahoochee mountains, the last dying spurs of the Appaachian tains, the last dying spurs of the Appaschian range, which rests in the blue atmosphere along the continent from the gates of the St. Lawrence to the broad channel of the of the south in a single letter, and I shall therefore make this merely an introduction to others, which shall treat the various products more in detail. The people of the north ought to know pretty well by this time that this exhibition is a large one; the exhibits cover twenty-one acres in extent; its show of American products is larger than that of the centennial, and the whole exposition is, next to the centennial, the largest that the country has ever had. It is unnecessary to enumerate these bare details, for the extent of the exposition is now pretty generally understood. Its most distinctive and by far most interesting features are those illustrating the natural wealth of the south.

The cotton exposition is a success in several ways, but it will not be successful fihancially. This city has done all in its power, and the gentlemen who are at the head of the enterprise have been energetic as human beings can be, and have performed their difficult task thoroughly well. They have made a splendid exhibition. The old racing grounds have been converted into a busy scene of industry. The flooring space on which the exhibits are covers twenty-one acres, and the exhibits are covers twenty-one acres, and the ex hibits are covers twenty-one acres, and the exposition is second in size to the centennial alone. As to American exhibits the claim is made that it is larger and better than the centennial. It is in some respects infinitely more interesting than the centennial, and that in the line of American exhibits. The exposition is as good as it could be made under the circumturesces, and it is containly worthy of a visit and animal industries. The dele-gates to the cotton convention I thought had better meet there, and Mr. Kimball, of the a large and influential audience, among them representative men of the manufacturing districts of New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and New Jersey. I discovered the manner in which the interests of the country had grown in the last fifty years, its agricultural interests in particular, and the aggregate acreage of cotton in the cotton states. I pointed out the yast amount of Correspondence NewYork Times.

The south will derive profound moral as well as material benefits from the growth of villages and the diversifying of labor—two results which will surely and speedily flow from the growth of manufacturing interests. A more desolate and melancholy spectacle than one of the small villages in the south, it would be hard to find. They are most too wretched to be pathetic, with their single red and dusty street stealing along between the irregular rows of mean. and squalid hovels, half-denuded of their ancient coats of whiteand dusty street stealing along between the irregular rows of mean, and squalid hovels, half-denuded of their ancient coats of whitewash, and including among their number, probably as the only public buildings, a 7 by 9 railroad passenger station and freight depot combined in one, a store, and a hotel where the keen appetite of the traveler is outraged with hot biscuit and unspeakable ham. What a contrast to the country villages of Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, or Massachusetts, where from the point where the church spire, the town hall, or the high school are first seen from the train windows one approaches to find a cluster of comfortable and even expensive houses around a shaded green or common, broad streets, half a dozen stores and shops, a little factory or two, a post office, hotel, and a half dozen machanics' shops—wheelwrights, blacksmiths, harnessmakers, carpenters, painters, and boot and shoe makers. One or two such villages in every county on this side of Mason and Dixon's line would work the social and moral regeneration of the south. The life of the planter before the war was barren enough. Every body knows what it was—six or eight months with his slaves and overseers and the rest in Savannah, New Orleans, Richmond, or at the springs, where he met haadly anybody outside his own class, men thinking, talking, drinking just what he himself thought, said and drank. The life of the farmers and planters of to-day, of the units who make up the mass of the southern population, is infinitely more barren and void of everything that makes life worth living. Of the grace and strength which come of man's fellowship with man the farmer of the south knows next to nothing. His neighbor, who is like himself, and his cottor factor, of whom he has always that morbid dread that comes of debt, are almost the only persons he who is like himself, and his cotten factor, of whom he has always that morbid dread that comes of debt, are almost the only persons he can meet to swap ideas with from one year's end to another. Of the outside world and the progress of the times he is wholly ignorant. It is among a people leading a dull, unchanging, empty life like this that are developed that mischievous tenacity of old and perhaps unsound opinions, and that rooted aversion to new light and fresh ideas—bourbonism, in short—which have made the settlement of the south's social and political problems so difficult. All this will disappear with the coming of the time when every planter and farmer of the time when every planter and farmer shall visit the village of the future—not a pinched and poverty-stricken assemblage of whitewashed shanties, but a thriving yillage, such as are to be seen all over the north—two or three times a week, and have a few minutes talk with half a dozen villagers or people from talk with half a dozen villagers or people from the next town while his bag of wheat is being ground or his mule is being shod. Rural communities have many virtues which city folk have not, but there is a polish of manners and of mind which is indispensably necessary to the good and intelligent citizen—makes him such, in fact—and which is too generally lacking among the agricultural population of the south. City people here think that "cracker" is a good enough descriptive term for the poor white farming class. After two or three generations of the civilizing influence of manufacturing villages scattered through of manufacturing villages scattered through the country, the "cracker" will show a won-derful change. The superintendent of the Reading, Pa., Passenger railway Co., Mr. John A. Riggs, narrates the following experience: One of our horses was sprained in such a manner as to be useless. We had tried different preparations without the contraction of the Reading, Pa., Passenger Co., Mr. John A. Riggs, and Passenger Co., tions without any results. The use of St. Jacobs Oil effected a complete cure, and I can recommend it as a truly wonderful com-

One of the most interesting features of our visit in Atlanta was the ride over the northern portion of the city to view the fortifications and the scene of some of the bloodiest contests of the war. Our guide on this occasion was Major Howell, one of the proprietors of The ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, a paper of national reputation, and one that has done much by its liberality and toleration to develop and bring to the front the state of Georgia. Major Howell was an artillery officer on the confederate side, of great fidelity, and commanded a battery in Cleburn's division, under Hood. His graphic discriptions of the scenes in which he took part, together with his genial flow of wit and jovial, good fellowship made this ride one long to be remembered.

The Atlanta exposition is valuable, because it is a proof of at least the wonderful resources of the south. Of course other resources of the south. Of course other resources of the south of course other resources may exist without development, but the exposition shows also that development is in active progress. NORTH PRYOR STREET .- The attention of NORTH PRYOR STREET.—The attention of those in authority is urgently called to the condition of the "so-called" sidewalks and roadway of North Pryor street. While the privilege is given to build street railways, the corporations should be made to know that the citizens have some rights that they are bound to respect. The builders of the railroad through Pryor and Wheat streets have left these streets in a most deplorable condition, particularly the turning at the corner of Wheat. For several days past this portion of tion, particularly the turning at the corner of Wheat. For several days past this portion of the city has been nearly impassable during daylight; while at night (since the moon enters into the arrangement for lighting the streets, with no penalty for default) those whose homes or business require them to travel this route, should be brave indeed, since with great discomfort they also risk peril to limb, if not to life. Our city fathers may that this receils are long as foring and know that this people are long suffering, and not given to complaint, but in this case it would seem that they are entitled to something more than the reminder by fi. fa. or otherwise that a a street tax must be paid or worked out.

OLIVETTE.—The Hess Acme opera troupe, admirable in organization, containing many talented artists, an excellent chorus, and a good orchestra, will begin an engagement at DeGive's opera house to-night, in Audran's sparkling and charming opera, Olivette. It is airy, merry and pretty, full of frolicsome fun, and cheery, catchy melody. It makes no pretensions to be grand, but is bright and sunshiny, with fine opportunities for comicalities, and the fun is second only to the melody in attractiveness. The plot has an calities, and the fun is second only to the melody in attractiveness. The plot has an abundance of Iudicrous situations. The music keeps up without cessation in a sparkling, rollicking style—in short, it is just that mixture of comedy and music which is pleasing to the popular taste. The company of 45 is a strong and excellent one. For two weeks the troupe played in New Orleans to very large and enthusiastic audiences. Doubtless the opera house will be crowded to-night by visitors to our city and all of our citizens who are fond of mirth, music and mischief. are fond of mirth, music and mischief.

Olivette will be repeated at the matinee
Saturday afternoon, and the engagement will close Saturday night with Audran's comic opera, "The Mascotte."

BOSS WOOD'S DEATH

Causes an Investigation by the Coroner. City Water Filters, China Dinner, the dead body of Boss Wood, a negro man who died Tea and Toilet Sets, Vases, Statu- in a wagon on Pryor street yesterday evening about

Wood had been working on the Georgia actific railroad, near Douglasville, and with a lot of companions left the camp yesterday morning to eturn to their homes in Virginia. With him there were thirteen negroes, all of whom were more or ess sick, and this was the cause for the desire to each Virginia.

were thirteen negroes, all of whom were more or less sick, and this was the cause for the desire to reach Virginia.

They were working for Wright & Co., who after paying them their wages furnished them two wagons to come to Atlanta and delegated John J. Edwards, a white man in their service to accompany them to this place and to secure transportation for the party to their homes.

For some time past their has been quite an amount of sickness at the capp and on Wednesday evening the physician in charge advised Wood not to undertake the trip, but when the wagons were hitched up yesterday morning he insisted upon going, and was carried from his bed in a hospital which had been established by the contractors for the sick laborers to the wagon. In the same wagon with Wood there were six other men, all of whom were sick. They left the camp about eight o'clock in the worning. On the way Wood seemed to be doing well, and his death was not thought of by any one until after the wagon stopped near Redd's stable, on Pryor street, when he suddenly grew worse, and died before medical aid could be procured.

Immediately after his death Wood and the sick men were taken to Carzile's undertaking rooms, where the dead man was laid out and the sick provided for. In one end of the room-Wood's body was stretched upon a board, while the sick, nine in number, were scattered about promiscuously. To a call for medical aid Dr. Robert Westmoreland responded and after an examination of the men pronounced the disease typhod fever. Among the nine was one Pavy Harris, whose condition demanded his attention almost to the entire exclusion of the rest of the party. When the physicians reached him his pulse was entirely gone, his body was cold, and yet his face was covered with perspiration, and for quite a while his death was momentarily expected. but by the aid of brandy he was given a fresh lease upon life, and at a late hour last night was still breathing although the physicians look upon his death as a certainty.

and at a late hour last light was shill breathing although the physicians look upon his death as a certainty.

Soon after dark Coroner Hilburn empaneled a juryand began an inquest. The first witness examined was John J. Edwards, the white man who came with the party. He said that he left the camp with the men, fourteen in number, about 8 o'clock yesterday morning, and that they were all sick. The physician advised them not be leave, and Mr. Wright, the contractor, was averse to their going, but they insisted and left. He did not think any one was dangerously ill and was greatly surprised when he heard of Wood's death. He also stated that several of the men had died at the camp hospital, an old building in a cotton field within the past, two weeks, and that he had been told that they died of typhoid fever. He was certain that they had had every possible attention. He was also sure that Mr. Wright did not want them to leave, but to stay and return to work as soon as they were able.

Dr. Robert Westmoreland, testified as to the.

were able.

Dr. Robert Westmoreland testified as to the disease prevalent among the sick, and said that it was typhoid fever and that in his opinion the man's death was the result of that disease.

Peter Sanders, who drove one of the wagons, testified that when Wood was put into the wagon he was unable to walk and that the physician advised him not to go. He said that when Wood died after reaching town his death was sudden and unexpected.

The jury declined to hear further testimony, and in a verdict declared that Wood's death was the result of typhoid fever.

Wood was a young negro who came with Wright & Co. from Virginia about three months ago. His body was, by Coroner Hillburn, turned over to Cargille for burial at the county's expense.

MACON, GA., July 26, 1881. Dear Sir-I have on my hands a faithful old olored woman, who has for years been afflicted most terribly with a sore leg, which has never been benefitted by the treatment of a number of physicians with various remedies. The use of Sanodine for a few weeks has so materially benefitted her that I cheerfully nend it to all similarly afflicted.

Respectfully yours,
